

Benn Lippen School

ABOUT

Ben Lippen School is private day and boarding school dedicated to instilling a strong sense of faith in their students through both extra curricular activities and academics. The name of the school is derived from a Scottish phrase meaning “Mountain of Trust,” and is indicative of the significance of the responsibility assumed when teachers begin the task of educating young people. The resident program is an important aspect of Ben Lippen School. The potential for spiritual growth and emotional maturity is tremendous in an atmosphere of support, cooperation and mutual respect. The faculties at Ben Lippen encourage their students to find and pursue their talents and strengths all while developing a strong love for Christ.

LOCATION

Ben Lippen is located in historic Columbia, South Carolina. It is a 15 minute drive to a number of attractions where students can learn about art or catch a concert at the fascinating Columbia Museum of Art, the Kroger Center for the Arts, or the famous Finlay Park. There are also 5 major colleges and universities in the immediate area

CURRICULUM

Small class sizes (an average of 12 to 1 faculty to student) allow teachers to give their students the personalized attention that they need to excel both academically and spiritually. Ben Lippen offers a diligent college prep course of study to prepare its students for their future including a full complement of AP courses including Biology, Calculus, Chemistry, and physics. Students needing additional English instruction can take advantage of the on-campus ESL program. 98% of Ben Lippens students move on to college after graduation. In addition to academics students are encouraged to participate in the many sports teams such as soccer, cross country, and tennis. Ben Lippen also has a robust arts program as well as student government and many diverse clubs for students to participate in.
